

PUBLICATION ETHICS AND MALPRACTICE STATEMENT

The Academic Forum – Journal of Economics, Management and Law is committed to maintaining high standards of publication ethics and research integrity. The journal follows the principles and guidance of the Committee on Publication Ethics (COPE) and applies appropriate procedures for dealing with suspected publication malpractice, errors and retractions.

Any form of unethical behaviour, including plagiarism, duplicate publication, fabrication, falsification and inappropriate authorship, is unacceptable.

By submitting a manuscript to the journal, authors confirm that the work is original and that they comply with the journal's publication ethics requirements.

The following duties outlined for editors, authors, and reviewers are based on the COPE Code of Conduct for Journal Editors.

Duties of Editors

1. Publication Decisions. Editors are responsible for making publication decisions based on the scholarly quality, originality, relevance and ethical standards of the manuscript, taking into account the peer reviewers' reports where applicable.

2. Fair Review. Editors must ensure that manuscripts are assessed on their scholarly content without regard to the authors' nationality, institutional affiliation, gender, religion, political views or other characteristics unrelated to the scholarly assessment of the work.

3. Confidentiality. Editors must keep information concerning submitted manuscripts confidential and must not disclose such information to anyone other than the authors, reviewers and other individuals directly involved in the publication process.

4. Disclosure and Conflicts of Interest. Editors must not use unpublished information disclosed in a submitted manuscript for their own research without the author's explicit written consent. Editors must disclose and appropriately manage any conflict of interest.

5. Integrity of the Scholarly Record. Editors should take appropriate action when concerns arise regarding the accuracy, originality or integrity of published or unpublished work, including the publication of corrections, retractions or other editorial notices where necessary.

Duties of Authors

1. Reporting Standards. Authors should present an accurate account of their research and an objective discussion of its significance. The manuscript should comply with the journal's submission and ethical requirements.

2. Originality. Authors must ensure that the submitted work is original and that all sources and contributions have been appropriately acknowledged.

3. Multiple, Redundant or Concurrent Publication. Authors should not submit the same manuscript to more than one journal simultaneously. Authors should not publish substantially overlapping or redundant versions of the same research without appropriate disclosure and justification.

4. Acknowledgement of Sources. Authors should properly acknowledge all sources, data and publications that have contributed to the research and cite relevant prior work.

5. Authorship. Authorship should be limited to individuals who have made a substantial contribution to the conception, design, conduct, analysis or interpretation of the research, or to the preparation of the manuscript. All authors must have approved the final version of the manuscript and agreed to its submission. All individuals who qualify for authorship should be included as authors, while individuals who have not made a substantial contribution should not be listed as authors. Changes in authorship after submission, including the addition or removal of an author, require the agreement of all authors and approval by the Editor-in-Chief. Generative AI and AI-assisted technologies cannot be listed as authors or co-authors.

6. Data and Research Materials. Authors should retain the data and research materials necessary to support the findings of their work and should provide relevant information or materials where reasonably required for the verification of the research, subject to applicable legal, ethical and confidentiality restrictions.

7. Disclosure of Errors. If authors discover a significant error or inaccuracy in their submitted or published work, they should promptly inform the Editor-in-Chief and cooperate in correcting the record where necessary.

8. Use of Generative AI. Authors must disclose any use of generative AI and AI-assisted technologies in the preparation of the manuscript in accordance with the journal's policy. Such technologies must not be listed as authors or co-authors. Authors remain fully responsible for the content and integrity of their work.

Duties of Reviewers

1. Confidentiality. Information concerning manuscripts submitted for review must be kept confidential and treated as privileged information.

2. Acknowledgement of Sources. Reviewers should identify relevant published work that has not been appropriately cited and should alert the editor to substantial similarity or potential plagiarism of which they have personal knowledge.

3. Standards of Objectivity. Reviews should be conducted objectively and professionally. Reviewers should express their views clearly and provide appropriate supporting arguments.

4. Conflicts of Interest. Reviewers must disclose any actual, potential or perceived conflict of interest and should decline the review where such a conflict could affect, or reasonably appear to affect, their impartiality.

5. Promptness. Reviewers should inform the editorial team promptly if they are unable to complete a review within the agreed timeframe.

6. Unpublished Material. Reviewers must not use unpublished information obtained through the peer review process for their own research or personal advantage.

Handling of Misconduct and Corrections

The Academic Forum – Journal of Economics, Management and Law investigates suspected cases of publication malpractice in accordance with its policies and relevant COPE guidance. Depending on the nature and seriousness of the concern, the journal may request explanations or additional information from the authors, editors or reviewers and may take appropriate editorial action.

Where necessary, the Academic Forum – Journal of Economics, Management and Law may publish a correction, retraction, expression of concern or other editorial notice to maintain the integrity of the scholarly record.
